FEATURED PROJECTS

Train kids in Boys and Girls Club

Jackson County Master Gardener Volunteers created 13 topic areas for the Boys and Girls Club weekly sessions at the community garden. Each included a scientific level overview of the topics so the trainer can have an understanding of the subject, which they then need to present to the kids at an age appropriate level. Hands-on activities were included to better connect the kids to the topic. Since there are only 10 sessions with the club members, three of the topics can be rotated out so the kids do not get bored from doing the same things each year.

Introduce pollinators to the community

A Hugelkultur bed was established at the Spalding Community Garden and native plants were planted and used with the Boys and Girls Club. The Hugelkultur bed was built to avoid the problem with flooding at the community garden which destroyed the milkweed beds. It will be useful for demonstration because the attendees will be able to see pollinators in a natural setting.

An individual collected monarch caterpillars and chrysalis from the wild and raised them for release. The rearing containers were brought to the Jackson County Farmers' Market twice a week from June to August, and to the Karner Blue Butterfly Festival to show the different stages of the monarchs' metamorphosis. Details about the threats to monarch survival and how to raise them were presented to the general public through a display and conversation. Having live caterpillars and butterflies makes the whole topic of pollinator protection tangible to the general public.
